The Grove Park Inn has undergone many changes since it opened in 1913, but it still retains the heritage, the character and the charm of the Arts & Crafts movement.

Any other weekend of the year, guests who come to the Grove Park Inn often leave without discovering the hidden history of this fascinating hotel. Fortunately for us, Sue Angell, a Grove Park Inn employee who loves to share with us her knowledge of the hotel, has been leading historical walking tours during the Arts & Crafts Conference for several years now - and knows much about its Arts & Crafts heritage.

After meeting you at the north fireplace in the Great Hall, Sue will take you on an informative journey through the Grove Park Inn and back in time. You will learn what happened to the original rock pillars, the Roycroft chandeliers and the Heywood-Wakefield wicker rockers in the Great Hall.

Sue will also take you to the Palm Court, the hotel's second lobby and one most people never see. Along the way you'll discover why the elevators are hidden inside the fireplaces, learn what happened to the original Arts & Crafts stencils and see where F. Scott Fitzgerald lived for two years - and nearly died.

Sue will also share with you stories about some of the Inn's famous guests, along with the feud that developed between owner E.W. Grove and his son-in-law Frederick L. Seely, the man who designed, built and managed the Grove Park Inn (and who selected its Arts & Crafts furnishings) from 1913-1927. Their feud over ownership of the hotel, which divided the Grove and Seely families for decades, was finally resolved in a St. Louis courtroom.

For additional information on the history of the hotel and the role of the Roycrofters, autographed copies of Bruce Johnson's book Built for the Ages: A History of the Grove Park Inn are available in the Books, Magazines & More Show.

Johnson's second GPI book, which was awarded the Thomas Wolfe Literary Award for 2009, entitled Grove Park Inn Arts & Crafts Furniture, is also for sale.

It explores in detail the role of the Roycrofters and the Arts & Crafts movement in the original design and furnishing of the Grove Park Inn, as well as in the later additions to this historic hotel.

And for a blend of history and mystery, check out Bruce Johnson's novel, An Unexpected Guest on page 57, which will take you on your own private tour of the Grove Park Inn.

Regardless, be sure you do some exploring in the Palm Court and down the side hallways before you leave.

Small Group Discussions

One of the most popular aspects of this conference are our daily Small Group Discussions, which provide us with the opportunity to sit down with other Arts & Crafts enthusiasts who share our passions and our interests. We purposely schedule several of these simultaneously to keep the numbers small so that the discussions are personal and lively. The meeting rooms are also small, so arrive early -- and have a second choice ready if needed. Our wonderful discussion leaders are volunteers, not seminar presenters, so they will ask you to share your experiences and your opinions (as if you needed any urging!)

Stephen Gray To Receive Lifetime Achievement Award

10:00am Saturday
Heritage Ballroom

"My passion for collecting began in the summer of 1976 when I purchased an old farmhouse in rural New York."

Thus began the collecting life of Stephen Gray, the most recent recipient of the Arts & Crafts Lifetime Achievement Award, sponsored by the non-profit Arts & Crafts Research Fund.

To be considered for this award, nominees must have demonstrated at least 25 years of involvement in the Arts & Crafts movement and their dedication to the education of new Arts & Crafts collectors, through public speaking, publication of research, involvement in the annual national Arts & Crafts Conference at the Grove Park Inn, and participation in museum exhibitions.

In 1979, Stephen Gray, founder of Turn of the Century Editions, published the first of several furniture catalogs originally distributed by Gustav Stickley, the Roycrofters, L. & J.G. Stickley, Charles Limbert and others. These reproduction catalogs have continued to provide collectors with information critical to recognizing signed and unsigned Arts & Crafts furniture.

Stephen and Bogey at home.

In addition, Mr. Gray has shared his extensive knowledge of Arts & Crafts furniture, art pottery and metalware through other publications, serving as a contributor to influential books, an advisor to noted authors and as a consultant to major Arts & Crafts collectors and collections. He has generously loaned items from his collection to such landmark exhibitions as "The Art That Is Life" (Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, 1987), "Arthur Wesley Dow" (American Federation of Arts, 1999) and "Teco: Art Pottery of the Prairie School" (Erie Art Museum, 1989).

In 2008 the Wadsworth Atheneum Museum of Art hosted "At Home with Gustav Stickley: Arts & Crafts From the Stephen Gray Collection," an exhibition built around his extensive collection of early Gustav Stickley furniture, American art pottery and metalware. A catalog by the same title accompanied the exhibition.

The Arts & Crafts Lifetime Achievement Award is sponsored by the non-profit Arts & Crafts Research Fund. Previous recipients are Robert Winter, Rosalie Berberian and Kitty Turgeon. The award includes an engraved hammered copper tray commissioned from Michael Adams and Dawn Hopkins of Aurora Studios.

Preservation Society House Tours

Feature Architect Richard Sharp Smith

Asheville's rich architectural heritage owes more to Richard Sharp Smith than any other single individual, making this year's Preservation Society house tour even more significant than it has been in the past.

Born in England, Smith joined the practice of Richard Morris Hunt, architect for much of the Vanderbilt family. Hunt's final commission was the 255-room Biltmore Estate in Asheville, for which he assigned young Richard Sharp Smith to be the on-sight supervising architect. After Hunt's death, Smith remained in Asheville, designing numerous buildings on the Biltmore Estate for George Vanderbilt before striking off on his own.

The majority of Smith's commissions in Asheville appeared during the Arts & Crafts era and reveal the influence the movement had on the architect. Many of his houses feature expansive porches with simple, curved corbels, square rather than turned balusters, fieldstone foundations and cedar shingle siding. Among his personal trademarks that other architects copied was the use of 'pebbledash' - a rough, exterior stucco laced with large, river pebbles.

Stops on this year's tour will include two winners of the Preservation Society's coveted Griffin Award for historic preservation, as well as the 1914 Masonic Temple, featuring a third floor auditorium with fascinating original scenery.

The tour will include on-bus guides who will point out key buildings in Asheville's architectural history, as well as docents to answer questions in the homes to be toured. Participants should be able to walk a city block and negotiate stairs.

Advance reservations are required, since seating is limited on each bus. To check on the availability of seats on any of the daily tours (and to confirm your advance registration), please stop by the

Saturday 1:00pm - 4:00pm
Sunday 12:30pm - 3:30pm

(Please board 15 minutes in advance at the Sammons Wing entrance.)

Preservation Society information table near the Arts & Crafts Registration Desk in the Sammons Wing hallway. The cost of the tour is $35 per person.

Tickets will be held for pickup at the Society's tour table during the conference. Please pick up your reserved tickets at least thirty minutes before your scheduled tour.

All proceeds go to the Preservation Society to fund their efforts to protect and preserve Asheville's and Buncombe County's architectural heritage. Please dress appropriately for the weather and wear comfortable shoes, for some walking may be required between the bus and each stop.

O Pioneers!

Dogwood Room (Sammons Wing)

Led by 24-year attendee Pat Bartinique, our Book Club discussions continue to increase in popularity. This year's selections were announced last September, but feel free to drop in even if you did not have a chance to finish (or start?) either of our books.

The biography of Olmsted, who established landscape architecture as a profession, provides an enthralling story for serious designers and historians as well as those simply looking for a compelling read. O Pioneers! grew out of Cather's experiences during her formative years, along with her familiarity with the communities of Midwest settlers, her conversations with immigrant farmers and the primitive power of the prairie itself.

Each of our Book Club discussions will take place in the Dogwood Room, which is around the corner past the Heritage Ballroom (see map on page 80).

If you have a suggestion for next year, please leave it with Pat Bartinique or email it to Bruce Johnson at bj1915@charter.net.

Arts & Crafts Jewelry Techniques

Jeweler and craftsman Todd Hawkinson is also a dedicated teacher and determined researcher who has studied not only the Arts & Crafts style of jewelry, but the techniques the craftsmen and craftswomen whose work we collect employed at that time. Todd will demonstrate how Arts & Crafts jewelry was made and will have on display many of the tools, such as soldering blow pipes, as well as examples from various time periods.

Todd's twenty-minute demonstrations and discussions will provide you with insight into Arts & Crafts jewelry, enabling you to understand and appreciate those examples you encounter in our show and others in your travels. Stop by any afternoon during the times listed below and add to your growing knowledge about Arts & Crafts techniques.

Arts & Crafts Woodworking

Roosevelt Room

8th Floor, Vanderbilt Wing

Our resident woodworker Chuck Conner has returned this year to again demonstrate classic Arts & Crafts joinery techniques in his booth in the Contemporary Craftsirms Show.

This year Chuck will be demonstrating how craftsmen working during the Arts & Crafts era created a pegged mortise and tenon joint - a staple for Arts & Crafts woodworkers then and now. Chuck will also talk about how quartersawn oak was cut and why it is that our antiques often have that dramatic, wavy quartersawn grain -- and why it is that new examples of Arts & Crafts furniture often do not have that same dramatic grain pattern.

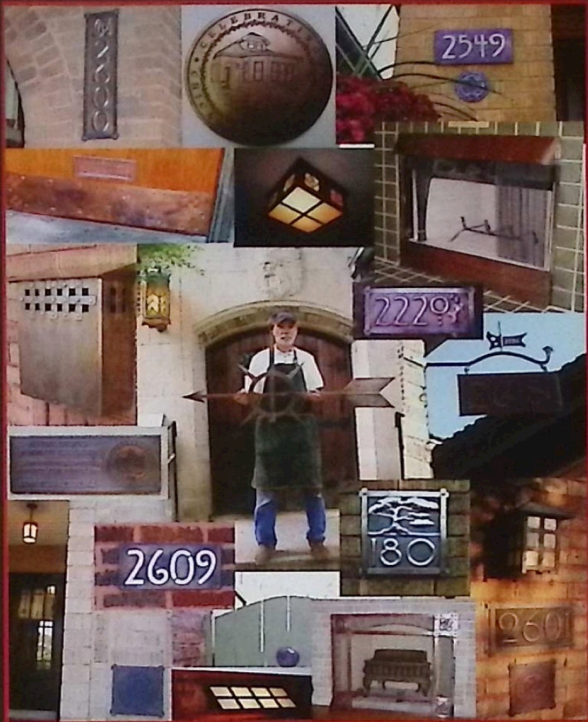

Regardless whether you are a budding woodworker or a furniture collector, you will enjoy the education you will receive just watching Chuck Conner for a few minutes. Stop by his booth during show hours for one of his informal demonstrations and discussions - or ask him a question - and you will walk away with knowledge you can use in your collecting.

Arts & Crafts 101: A Beginner's Guide *

- Bruce Johnson

* For first, second and third year attendees only. Notes for this seminar available at ArtsAndCraftsCollector.com.

Former English teacher and Golden Oak collector turned writer and Arts & Crafts enthusiast, Bruce Johnson founded the Arts & Crafts Conference in 1988, followed it with several books and launched the news website ArtsandCraftsCollector.com in 2010. Johnson, who also founded and directs the non-profit Arts & Crafts Research Fund, divides his time between traveling for the Minwax Company, organizing the Arts & Crafts Conference and working on his next book. Johnson's new historical novel, An Unexpected Guest, set in 1918 at the Grove Park Inn, premieres here this weekend.

Friday Seminar:

The Consequences of the Arts & Crafts Movement on the 20th Century

- Andre' Chaves

Andre' Chaves grew up in Rio de Janeiro, far away from the world of Arts & Crafts. His fortuitous arrival in East Aurora as an exchange student in the sixties failed to open the door to the importance of the surrounding Roycroft Campus. It wasn't until 25 years later that the aesthetics of Scandinavian furniture intercepted the simple lines of a Stickley chair, creating an intense attraction to the historical period we refer to as the Arts & Crafts era. His study of this period led to a more comprehensive understanding of the movement, involving the Western European Countries in a common search for a modern aesthetic unrelated to historicism.

Biltmore Industries Walking Tours

Friday	10:00am - 11:00am
Saturday	3:00pm - 4:00pm
Sunday	1:00pm - 2:00pm

Starts: Biltmore Industries Museum

Begun in 1901 as a woodcarving class for the sons of Biltmore Estate workers, Biltmore Estate Industries soon grew to include the weaving of homespun cloth on oak looms, carving bowls and bookends and building handmade furniture. Founded and supported by George and Edith Vanderbilt, the Biltmore Estate Industries won several awards and honors at national competitions and exhibitions. In 1917, after the death of George Vanderbilt in 1914, the business was purchased by Frederick L. Seely, designer and manager of the Grove Park Inn.

That same year Seely began construction on five Arts & Crafts workshops on the grounds of the hotel. Renamed Biltmore Industries in 1917, the young men and women who worked there created handwoven cloth for suits and hand-carved bookends, bowls, stools, stands, picture frames and other articles for sale to Asheville residents and tourists.

Beginning in 1928, after the Grove family elected not to renew his lease on the Grove Park Inn, Fred Seely poured his heart, soul and energy into Biltmore Industries. Gradually the original emphasis on woodcarving and woodworking gave way to the weaving of homespun cloth for men's and women's suits, including those worn by Mrs. Herbert Hoover and Eleanor Roosevelt, both frequent visitors to Asheville and close friends of Seely.

Fred Seely skillfully guided Biltmore Industries through the darkest days of the Great Depression, while next door the Grove Park Inn floundered under a series of absentee owners and poor management. After Seely's death in 1942, ownership passed into the hands of his wife and children. Gradually the buildings began to deteriorate, as demand for homespun cloth declined.

After years of neglect, the Blomberg family, owners since 1953, made the decision to restore and preserve the buildings, transforming them into artisan workshops, a museum, a cafe, the nationally-ranked Grovewood Gallery, and an antique automobile museum. This daily tour will take you through buildings which appear much as they did during the Arts & Crafts era, giving you the opportunity to view one of the country's few continually operated Arts & Crafts enterprises.

Each free tour will start at the Biltmore Industries Museum, the third building on the right as you enter the grounds. Not all buildings are handicap accessible, nor are they all heated, so please dress appropriately.

Directions: Take the Vanderbilt glass elevator down to the lowest level, then exit through the doors and across the terrace. Take the steps down to the road and across to the flagstone sidewalk. Allow ten minutes time for the walk from the Great Hall.

Don't miss the B.I. display case in the Great Hall!

EXPLORE. DISCOVER. DREAM.

FOUR GREAT VENUES await you just inside the rustic iron gates adjacent to the historic Grove Park Inn Resort & Spa. Here, you'll discover a magical experience of art, craft, history and Old World charm. Ron was also interviewed as part of the PBS special Elbert Hubbard: An American Original. He learned his craft under the tutelage of Thomas R. Markusen, while earning his BFA Summa Cum Laude from the State University, and later earned an MFA in Metal & Jewelry Design from the School for American Craft at the Rochester Institute of Technology. He currently teaches art full time in the East Aurora School District, in addition to producing his metalwork in his home studio with the assistance of his talented wife Dawn Raczka.

Michael and his wife, Dr. Je' McCracken, have been collecting and studying the American Arts & Crafts Movement for over 35 years. Their current research is focused on the business operations of Gustav Stickley's company. This research has led to a book to be published in 2011, as well as this presentation at the Grove Park Inn conference and numerous small group discussions at previous Grove Park Inn conferences concerning the manufacturing and finishing of Stickley's furniture. Michael's dedication was recognized and furthered with a grant from the Arts & Crafts Research Fund.

Educational Displays In the Great Hall

"Mr. Stickley's Home"

Presented by The Stickley Museum at Craftsman Farms, our popular "Mr. Stickley" series continues to highlight various aspects of Gustav Stickley's enterprises. This year's display case contains an original Grueby lamp base, original interior and exterior lanterns, Craftsman Dairy bottles, roof tiles, restoration photographs, personal items and more -- all of great interest to anyone familiar with Gustav Stickley and Craftsman Farms. In addition, be sure to purchase a copy of the limited edition Mr. Stickley's Home: 1911 and other books of interest available at the Stickley Museum's table in the 8th floor Books Show. Be sure to see the article on page 48 and take a moment to become a member today!

Attend the special discussion group on Craftsman Farms on Saturday from 2:30-3:30 in the Great Hall near the display case (see page 14).

"American Art Tiles"

For several years the volunteers at the American Art Pottery Association have assembled a display in the Great Hall to further our understanding and appreciation for the art pottery we also label as Arts & Crafts pottery. Included in that category, but sometimes overlooked, are the art tiles produced by the same potteries we collect. Framed as wall art or displayed on tables and sideboards, art tiles are a delightful addition to any Arts & Crafts home or office, and this weekend's display is sure to inspire you. Also, make it a point to visit the AAPA table and additional display in the 10th floor Books, Magazines & More Exhibit, where you can become a member.

Attend the Small Group Discussion on Arts & Crafts Tiles in the Vanderbilt 7th floor Atrium on Saturday from 4:30-5:30 (see page 14).

"Biltmore Industries: An Arts & Crafts Enterprise in Asheville"

For years the hand-carved mahogany bowls and bookends bearing the Biltmore Industries brand languished in homes and area shops, over-looked and under-appreciated. Now gaining recognition, these objects are proudly taking their place alongside other Arts & Crafts pieces. Local collectors Scott Riviere and Bruce Johnson have assembled a sampling of Biltmore Industries work to accompany the Walking Tour, Biltmore Industries Museum and 1917 workshops next door to the Grove Park Inn (see page 28).

Independent scholar, writer and editor Anne Stewart O'Donnell received her Masters in the History of Decorative Arts through the Smithsonian and Parsons School of Design program in Washington, DC. Her Masters thesis on Arts & Crafts greeting cards became the basis for a Grove Park Inn seminar in 2004 and launched what may be a lifelong research quest into greeting cards in America from 1900 to World War II. A recipient of an Arts & Crafts Research Fund grant and former editor-in-chief of Style 1900 magazine, O'Donnell has lectured and written on many aspects of the Arts & Crafts movement. Her book C.F.A. Voysey: Architect, Designer, Individualist is due to be published this spring by Pomegranate.

Gustav Stickley Exhibit Exceeds All Expectations

by Bruce Johnson

So many times, it seems, the best planned and most highly anticipated museum exhibitions end up being cold and impersonal. In part, it is the nature of the beast: individual objects, isolated from their counterparts, are removed from their natural environment, analyzed and dissected in thirty words or less, then, in the end, reduced to an irrelevant and indecipherable curatorial code.

You can imagine my sense of relief, then, when I walked into the traveling exhibit Gustav Stickley and the American Arts & Crafts Movement and saw Gustav Stickley's model dining room - which he had unveiled in 1903 at his own Arts & Crafts exhibition in Syracuse - not reduced to rows of isolated, individual objects, but, instead, re-assembled as if in preparation for a Sunday dinner at the Stickley home.

Curator Kevin Tucker, who conceived, organized and directed the mammoth challenge of encapsulating the complexities and inconsistencies of Gustav Stickley within the restrictive environment of a traveling museum exhibition, knew full well the pitfalls and landmines that awaited him.

He credits Roycroft author and activist Kitty Turgeon with having planted the germ of the idea in him as far back as 1990, but it was not until Kevin arrived in Dallas in 2003 to become the new Curator of Decorative Arts and Design that he could undertake this project.

"The greatest challenge for the exhibition," Kevin explained, "was to resolve the scope of the project -- emphasizing Stickley's most aesthetically successful and emblematic works -- and to secure the corresponding loans. Most of the works in the exhibition have never before been published or seen by the public, but have resided in private collections."

As you would expect, the exhibition explores and illustrates every phase of Gustav Stickley's amazing fifteen-year career as an Arts & Crafts furniture manufacturer, from his experimental work of 1900 with its obvious Art Nouveau influences to his massive 1901-1904 forms with their emphasis on hammered and cast hardware, exposed and keyed tenons, thick leather and large, decorative tacks. Included as well is ample evidence of his willingness to experiment with metal inlay, wooden knobs, square spindles, green dyes, even curly maple, mahogany and wicker.

The result is an exhibition which is organized in such a way that it invites comparison between objects, illustrates the evolution of key forms and provides the viewer with the opportunity not only to study individual objects closely, but to stand back and appreciate the Arts & Crafts theorem that the 'whole is greater than the sum of its parts,' as demonstrated by the 1903 dining room assemblage.

In addition to the 1903 dining room, this exhibition includes nearly one hundred works produced by Stickley's designers and workshops, including furniture, metalwork, lighting and textiles, along with architectural drawings and related designs. The exhibit is currently on display at the Dallas Museum of Art until May 8, after which it will appear at the San Diego Museum of Art from June 18 through September 11, 2011.

As Bonnie Pitman, director of the host Dallas Museum of Art, noted, "Gustav Stickley and the American Arts & Crafts Movement will provide new perspective on design, production and dissemination of his firm's work. The exhibition will also provide a deeper understanding of his artistic enterprise in transforming the vision of the ideal household of the early 20th century."

"During these years, Stickley's firm produced works that embodied a bold new simplicity, forthrightness and stability in the face of tumultuous times," Kevin Tucker added. "Not content simply to create these items, Stickley and his employees shaped and promoted the ideological framework of the Arts and Crafts movement where these beautiful, useful and simple objects were presented as integral to a better way of living."

For those of you unable to experience what is sure to take its place alongside three other landmark exhibitions, "The Arts & Crafts Movement in America" (Princeton, 1972), "The Art That Is Life" (Boston, 1987), and "Virtue In Design" (Los Angeles County Museum, 1990), you must add to your collection the finest Arts & Crafts exhibition catalog I have yet seen, Gustav Stickley and the American Arts & Crafts Movement (Kevin Tucker, ed., Dallas Museum of Art, Yale University Press, 2010). From its crisp, sharp photography to its insightful analysis, this book serves not only as a record of this major exhibition, but will become a major reference tool for researchers, writers and collectors.

Craftsman Farms Centennial:

A year to remember the past,
celebrate in the present and create the future

by Heather Stivison, Executive Director

at Craftsman Farms — from Stickley's design and creation of this special place, to the Farny family's noteworthy care of the property, to the its rescue from the wrecking ball and, then, to the formation of the Craftsman Farms Foundation.

We chose the homecoming theme because here at the Stickley Museum we strive to be a welcoming "home." A visitor to Stickley's Log House doesn't peer into stiffly decorated rooms that are behind velvet ropes. Our visitors walk right into the rooms, experiencing first-hand the irresistible sense of tranquility the home was designed to transmit. We welcome our visitors to find inspiration in the authentic experience of actually being inside Gustav Stickley's home. Without stanchions and other physical barriers found in so many historic house museums, our guests experience the sense of a true family home, the man who created that home and the family that actually lived here.

Now we invite you to continue this celebration throughout the year ahead with parties like the February 17th celebration at the Grovewood Café and with members' receptions and donor receptions later in the year. We encourage you to explore our third "Mr. Stickley's" exhibition which is on view in the Great Hall. This year's exhibition is entitled "Mr. Stickley's Home" and highlights some fascinating and newly uncovered writings about life at Craftsman Farms in 1911. We are excited about these new discoveries and especially about David Cathers' new essay in the exhibition catalogue about this newly-found material.

As members of the Craftsman Farms family we are a very sentimental group, and most of us want to select keepsakes of this significant year for our own collections. Our featured centennial keepsake is our limited edition centennial plate. The Craftsman Restaurant used Lenox ivory plates with Stickley's "Als Ik Kan" shopmark on the camel-colored rim. Thanks to the vision and generosity of Stickley great-grandson, Lou Glesmann, Lenox has reproduced those plates in a charger size and has added a special detail. In the center of the new plates is an image by artist Yoshiko Yamamoto, depicting the Log House. The image was commissioned by the Stickley Museum specifically for the centennial. In honor of the centennial only

In the fall of 1908, The Craftsman magazine announced Gustav Stickley's idealistic plans for his recently purchased farmland in Morris County, New Jersey. Readers got a taste of Stickley's delight in the planning and creation of his home at Craftsman Farms when he wrote, "I never before realized how much pleasure was to be found in the building of a dwelling that has completely expressed one's own taste and individuality as the painting of a picture or the writing of a book."

In the months that followed, readers learned more and more about the progress at Craftsman Farms. A 1911 article by Natalie Curtis, "The New Log House at Craftsman Farms," was especially enlightening and appeared along with the first photographs of Stickley's log house, which became the Stickley family home that same year.

The Stickley Museum at Craftsman Farms is celebrating the 100th anniversary of this event with a year-long centennial celebration that is a rich and inspiring blend of past, present and future. The centennial is an extraordinary opportunity to pause and reflect about Gustav Stickley's remarkable achievements and gain a deeper understanding of them. However, as much as this anniversary reminds us to look back in time, it also inspires us to look forward to the creation of a bright future and the fulfillment of many dreams in this place of idealism and beauty.

The celebrations officially kicked off on October 16th, 2010, with the Craftsman Homecoming Gala, a warm and friendly gathering of supporters who "came home" to Craftsman Farms to celebrate the milestone. Old friends and new gathered to support the Stickley Museum at Craftsman Farms today and to reminisce about the past 100 years

100 of these plates have been produced. Each one bears a message about the 100th anniversary and is hand-numbered on the back. They are available for purchase at our booth outside the antiques show, along with the signed, limited edition block print by Yoshiko Yamamoto and many other unique items.

The year 2011 will also be a year when we continue our mission to preserve and protect Craftsman Farms. As the new year dawns, we have a number of exciting preservation projects on our calendar. Major structural reinforcements are underway beneath the central staircase in the Log House, and the installation of a fire protection system estimated to cost approximately $500,000 is well underway. These are just some of the invisible ways that we continue to protect Craftsman Farms and ensure that the buildings and property last for generations.

We also continue to work on the more visible historic restoration projects that bring so many of you to visit. Having completed the master bedroom restoration in 2009, we are now beginning to restore the master bathroom. The study has been completed and the actual restoration will commence during this centennial year.

Another highly visible 2011 project will be the restoration of the cottage roofs. Now protected by a temporary ice and storm shield, these roofs will soon feature rough hewn red slate tiles as they did in Stickley's day. The original roof ridge tiles, currently stored and numbered, will be reinstalled on the top. These projects have been fully-funded by generous preservation grants from the Township of Parsippany-Troy Hills.

Because the Stickley Museum is a living organization, the celebration of this milestone cannot be solely about reflecting on the past or even about restoring the site. It must also be about new things begun and the untapped potential of the next 100 years. What will Craftsman Farms mean to people in the years ahead? How will artisans use the Arts and Crafts movement as inspiration for new creations? What will living the Arts and Crafts lifestyle mean in 10, 20, or 100 years? These are questions we look forward to exploring with you.

And so we invite you to help us create a bright and shining tomorrow by supporting events like our Conference for Emerging Scholars on April 15. With our encouragement, these young people can become more than just the torch bearers in the future — they can become the scholars who illuminate something we may have overlooked in The Craftsman, or who help others see the relevance of the Arts and Crafts movement to the world today and tomorrow. It is efforts like these that will enable Craftsman Farms to continue to evolve into an important and vital cultural resource rather than a quaint anachronism in the next century.

If you truly care about the future of Craftsman Farms, we hope you will become a member this weekend and offer your support. It is the only way to ensure that this National Historic Landmark's future celebrations will be as bright as they are today.

As our centennial year unfolds, we cannot help but ponder about the past, present and future. Celebrate, reflect, preserve, enjoy, learn, dream and inspire — these are our watchwords for 2011. We have an exhilarating future ahead!

- Patricia Gebhard

Patricia Gebhard, originally from Minneapolis, but considered a native of Santa Barbara since her move in 1961, attended Oberlin College, Mills College and the University of Minnesota, receiving degrees in both Art History and Library Science. She has traveled throughout Europe and the Middle and Far East, as well as spending a year in Turkey. She spent several years working for an art library, while also raising her daughters, alternating between horse shows and soccer games. For many years her main responsibility was the library education department, working on a skills manual and teaching library research. Since her retirement she spends the majority of her time writing, including the completion of several books ranging from murder mystery to reference work and, most recently, editing her husband's work on the Midwest firm of Purcell and Elmslie, which was published in 2006.

Susan Futterman has long been active in the Pasadena Arts & Crafts community. Several years ago she became captivated by the work of Pasadena printmaker Frances Gearhart, which led to her co-curating the exhibition, Behold the Day: The Color Block Prints of Frances Gearhart. While researching Gearhart, she discovered an unfinished, unpublished children's book titled, Let's Play, by the Gearharts, which she brought to life through The Book Club of California. Susan also co-published an edition of The Yellow Wallpaper by Frances Perkins Gilman with the help of Andre Chaves, and this past summer she received a Haynes Foundation Research Grant to explore the women of the Arroyo Culture.

TALIESIN®

100 YEARS OF CELEBRATION

SPRING GREEN, WISCONSIN

Taliesin Preservation, Inc. (TPI) will dedicate the 2011 season to the 100th anniversary celebration of a famous architect's residence in Spring Green, Wisconsin. The architect is Frank Lloyd Wright (1867-1959) and the 37,000-square-foot National Historic Landmark is Taliesin (1911-2011). Taliesin's centennial is an undeniable milestone in the estate's history, and TPI will be honoring it appropriately. In partnership with the Frank Lloyd Wright Foundation, TPI intends to draw from the artistic and cultural traditions which fueled Frank Lloyd Wright's life work and which he personally cherished. The program of events will be concentrated within the Taliesin tour season which runs May through October. It will include a series of concerts, performances, lectures, exhibits, artist workshops and a closing gala to pay tribute to Frank Lloyd Wright's home and legacy. A full listing of centennial events and news can be found at www.taliesinpreservation.org.

Frank Lloyd Wright lived at Taliesin for over 50 years of his life and the majority of his commissions were created there. It has been referred to as Wright's "autobiography in wood and stone" because of the tremendous role the home played in his life. TPI views 2011 as an opportunity not only to celebrate Wright's "autobiography," but to renew a very important mission that will continue far beyond this anniversary – to preserve Taliesin and share it with the world.

Robert Judson Clark, Pioneer of the Arts & Crafts Revival

Compiled by Bruce Johnson

When historians a century from now are re-evaluating the scope, the impact and the inspiration for the Arts & Crafts movement, the one individual they will recognize as the pioneer behind the Arts & Crafts Revival is that of Robert Judson Clark, who passed away January 4th at the age of 73

Born in 1938, Robert Judson Clark received his Bachelor of Arts from the University of California, Berkeley, during which time he first began to explore the "ultimate bungalows" of Charles and Henry Greene. Through his friendship with the widow of Charles Greene, he was able to convince her to donate her husband's papers and books to the University of California, Berkeley in 1959.

Clark's interest in Greene and Greene grew to include that of other California architects of the early twentieth century and of the nearly-forgotten Arts & Crafts movement. He left California to pursue his doctorate at Princeton University, where he became a member of the faculty in 1968 and where he taught art and architecture history until his retirement in 1996. Since then he had served as Professor Emeritus in the Department of Art and Archaeology.

It was while he was at Princeton that the idea for an exhibition and book on the American Arts & Crafts movement developed from a senior thesis into a national traveling exhibition. "The Arts & Crafts Movement in America: 1876-1916" and the exhibition catalog by the same name opened at Princeton University in 1972, before also introducing the Arts & Crafts movement to tens of thousands of people in Chicago and San Diego in the months that followed.

One of professor Clark's most enduring research interests during his tenure as a teacher was the architecture and the grounds of the Princeton campus. Among undergraduates one of his most popular upper-level courses was his seminar on Princeton architecture, which focused on the evolution of the campus in the context of modern architectural history. The drawings, documents and papers which he amassed are now housed in the Princeton University Library.

Upon his return to California, Professor Clark immersed himself in a constant stream of research projects, from architects Louis Christian Mullgardt of San Francisco and Joseph Maria Olbrich of Vienna to Bernard Maybeck, Ernest Coxhead, Louis Christian Mullgardt, Charles Greene and John Hudson Thomas. In addition, he continued to collaborate with and contribute to exhibitions and works on the Arts & Crafts movement, from the 1987 "Art That Is Life" to David Catthers' definitive biography Gustav Stickley.

From Ted Bosley, Director of the Gamble House:

"Beyond even his vast body of research and scholarly work, however, was Robert Clark's infectious enthusiasm and love for architecture history, a devotion he shared so generously with colleagues everywhere. I am particularly grateful for the unshakable devotion to Greene and Greene that he demonstrated, especially while I was a student living in the Thorsen house and wondering what I would do with my life. I am grateful, too, for his humor and humanity, which we will miss."

From Paul Bockhorst, filmmaker:

"To me, Robert's passing is doubly sad, in that a great deal of his original research and careful analysis of architectural subjects was never published. That being said, I'm grateful that Robert agreed to participate in three of my documentary films: "Greene & Greene: The Art of Architecture," "Designing with Nature: Arts & Crafts Architecture in Northern California," and "Divining Beauty: The Architecture of Bernard Maybeck." (The latter is still in production.) Viewers of these documentaries have an opportunity to see Robert at his best: bursting with child-like enthusiasm for architects and their buildings, yet clear-eyed and sharp-witted in his analysis. I'm glad to know that Robert's strong views and animated storytelling will live on in these productions. Farewell, Robert, and heartfelt thanks for your valuable contributions to our understanding and appreciation of the art of architecture."

From David Cathers, author of Gustav Stickley:

"Because of Robert Judson Clark, I've spent most of my adult life thinking and writing about Gustav Stickley. In the late 1960s I was aware of Art Nouveau and the furniture designed by Frank Lloyd Wright and Charles Rennie Mackintosh, but my knowledge was superficial. In 1972 I bought a new book called The Arts & Crafts Movement in America, 1876 - 1916, because it seemed related to the early 20th century furniture I already knew a little bit about and liked. Before then I didn't know anything about an "Arts and Crafts movement," and had never heard of Gustav Stickley. But I was instantly transfixed by the few photos of Stickley furniture that appeared in the book and I knew that I had to collect and learn everything I could about it. Robert Judson Clark's book had changed my life.

"In time I got to know Robert, and like everyone who met him I was delighted by his charisma, his ebullience and his boundless enthusiasm for all things Arts and Crafts. I also soon became aware of his sharp eye and amazing visual memory, his penetrating intellect, his profound learning, and his systematic and resourceful scholarly methods. Though I have many good memories of Robert, perhaps the best was the day he drove me around his beloved Bay area to show me the work of some of his favorite architects, among them Bernard Maybeck and Louis Christian Mullgardt. It was wonderful and enlightening to enter those Arts and Crafts-era buildings with Robert Clark as my guide, but what struck me just as much as the architecture was seeing how delighted the owners were to have him visit. To all of them he was a much-loved and honored figure, a very welcome guest.

"I've often regretted that Robert didn't publish more books, because there was so much knowledge and wisdom stored in his capacious brain. But the generations of scholars who have written about the Arts and Crafts movement after 1972 are in his debt, and whether they know it or not, many of their ideas and insights are suffused with his."

For years the famed Grove Park Inn, overlooking Asheville, North Carolina, has been home to a mysterious guest -- a beautiful young woman in a flowing pink gown.

The only problem – she's a ghost.

Bruce Johnson, 2009 recipient of the Thomas Wolfe Literary Award, takes us back to August 27, 1918, to explore the mystery:

Who was the Pink Lady and how did she die?

Was it an accident?

Was it a suicide?

Or could she have been murdered?

Chapter 1

The third floor Palm Court above the Great Hall occupies the center of the Main Inn. Extending to the roof, it is capped with an enormous skylight which admits an ocean of sunlight. The effect is a most delightful sun-parlor to be enjoyed on cool days, as well as a sitting-room for evenings.

She lay on her back, her long blond hair silhouetted by a small pool of blood slowly creeping out from beneath her head. He avoided looking at her eyes, bright blue eyes staring blankly at the skylight sixty feet above the Palm Court. Her long, delicate fingers quivered once, then slowly relaxed. He stood looking down at her, thinking he should check her neck for a pulse, but hesitated, somehow sensing there would be none.

~ An Unexpected Guest ~

"Black boys don't touch no white girls," he could hear his mama say. "Never! They done lynched a boy down in Hazelhurst -- same age as you -- jus' cause his feet fit some ol' shoe they found near this dead white girl. Dragged 'im back to the place where she died, Robert, and done tied 'im to a tree. Then her daddy poured gasoline o'er him. Gasoline, Robert. He begged 'em for mercy, oh, lordy, how that boy begged 'em. But her ol' daddy just spit in his face, spit in his face, then set 'im afire. Set 'im afire, Robert. They all jus' stood there and watched 'im burn. Listened to that poor boy scream and watched 'im burn - burn 'til he died, Robert. You hear me? Burn 'til he died. Now don't you touch no white girls up at that fancy hotel.

Don't you touch 'em.

Never!"

Robert looked around for someone, anyone, but the third floor atrium was deserted. Two long rows of wicker chairs, rustic rockers and oak planters stood facing each other, the chairs empty, their tufted, red leather cushions wiped clean of any dust. Dellie had cleared the tables of any glasses and polished the heavy Roycroft oak and copper ashtrays until they looked as new as the day they had arrived five years earlier.

Mr. Seely accepted no less.

The potted palms reaching upward toward the starry skylight rustled as an August breeze hurried through the open transom windows over the guest room doors, rushing up past the fourth, fifth and sixth floor balcony walls ringed with their stenciled friezes, frozen like figures on a Grecian urn.

Up toward the skylight and freedom, cool freedom.

Run.

Escape.

~ Bruce E. Johnson ~

A door carefully clicked shut somewhere down one of the upper wings, but no one appeared, no one stood looking down at Robert and the young woman in the pink dress who lay dying on the floor. Twelve inches of steel-reinforced concrete beneath her body had muffled any sound from the guests below in the Great Hall, guests gathered to watch the movie Her Final Reckoning, starring the beautiful Pauline Frederick.

No one, Robert thought, probably even glanced up at the ceiling when she slammed into the hard tile floor, decorated with rugs Mr. Seely had ordered all the way from France.

"Don't touch no white girls," his mama whispered in his ear.

He had to find Mr. Seely.

"Never!"

Mr. Seely would know what to do.

Scanning the deserted balconies above him, Robert slowly stepped back from the young woman in the pink dress, then turned and hurried to the night watchman's station near the elevator.

Hands shaking, he fumbled with the small brass key tucked into the pocket of his starched white pants, then opened the small, square door recessed into the wall. Inside he found a single brass light switch framing two ivory buttons.

He pushed the upper button, closed the door and locked it, hoping Mr. Seely would see the small white bulb now glowing in his office behind the front desk.

A Note from Bruce Johnson:

Thanks for reading the first chapter of my new novel. Trust me, I'm more nervous about its debut here this weekend than I have been standing in front of any audience.

I first heard the story of The Pink Lady on one of my earliest visits to the Grove Park Inn, now more than twenty-four years ago. As an historian, I was skeptical at first, especially with no documentation to confirm the death of any young woman in the Palm Court. But the stories and the reports, none of which had then been published, shared so much in common that I could not casually dismiss the possibility that the Grove Park Inn was, indeed, haunted.

But it was not until I began to learn more about Fred L. Seely and his deteriorating relationship with his famous father-in-law, Edwin W. Grove, that the idea occurred to me for an historical novel, one taking place on the night of August 27, 1918, when Henry Ford and Thomas Edison were both staying at the Grove Park Inn.

Rest assured, An Unexpected Guest is not a supernatural ghost story. In fact, I don't think there are any ghosts in it. A few twists and turns, two chapters I'm not so sure my mother will approve of, and, hopefully, an entertaining read, especially for an Arts & Crafts collector who has been to the Grove Park Inn.

The books we have here this weekend just arrived a few days ago and are part of a limited first edition, signed and numbered run of just 500 books. What happens next, well..., that remains to be seen.

As always, I thank you for your support,

Bruce Johnson

Some Books are to be Tasted, Others to be Swallowed, and Some Few to be Chewed and Digested - Francis Bacon

I was listening to a story on National Public Radio a few days ago regarding Barnes & Noble, Borders and other bookstores. The story line was this: Borders is going bankrupt because they failed to recognize the importance of electronic books. Barnes & Noble is thriving, not because their book sales are up 10%, but because sales of their Nook are up nearly 80%.

Electronic books.

The thought scared me.

As an Arts & Crafts collector, writer, researcher and publisher, the printed page has been as much a part of my life as the two worn fingers I type with. William Morris, Gustav Stickley, Elbert Hubbard - they all depended on the printed page to receive their information and convey their messages.

And so have I.

But are we headed down a path where, around the bend, you will be reading a future edition of this catalog on your Kindle or your Nook as you sit in the Great Hall?

Will getting a copy of the latest Arts & Crafts book, catalog or magazine simply be a matter of a quick download?

It would be easy for me to laugh, make a joke and declare that it will never impact you and me, just as many of us did when we were first introduced to email and websites.

Look where they have taken us....

I used to write long letters. In Februaries past my ear would ache at night after another day on the phone. Now I send and receive nearly a hundred emails a day. It has made me more efficient, causing me to comment the other day how I could not imagine organizing this conference without email. Just as Frank Lloyd Wright and Gustav Stickley prophesized, the email machine has freed me from boring, repetitive tasks and given more time to be creative.

And - so, I now have four websites....

Thus - I cannot dismiss ebooks as casually as I once might have.

But the thought still scares me.

I think.

- Bruce Johnson

American Art Pottery Association Convention To Be Held In Philadelphia

The American Art Pottery Association's 31st annual convention will be held in Philadelphia from April 28th through May 1st of this year. Activities will include a two-day pottery show and sale, art pottery auction, seminars and tour. The convention will be headquartered at the Sheraton Bucks County Hotel in Langhorne, Pennsylvania, located near I-95 and Route 1.

The country's greatest two-day pottery show and sale, featuring 45 pottery dealers from throughout America, will be held at the headquarters hotel on Saturday, April 30th and Sunday, May 1st. The sale will feature American and European art pottery, along with contemporary pottery. The event opens to convention registered members for a private viewing and sale on Saturday from 11:00am – 12:00 noon. The show and sale will be open to the general public from Noon – 5:00pm Saturday, and from 11:00am – 4:00pm Sunday. Admission is $6.00 per person for non-convention registered members and the general public. Activities scheduled as part of the show include hourly prizes and "Booth Chats," plus a pottery identification table on Sunday.

The live and on-line auction, featuring more than 350 pieces of vintage and contemporary art pottery, will be held Friday, April 29th at 4:30pm at the headquarters hotel. The auction will be conducted by Peter Gehres. The auction preview and author book signing event will begin at 2:30pm.

The first seminar will feature author Ken Forster, focusing on American pottery made between 1870 and 1955 that was considered "non-commercial," such as wares made or decorated by people in recreation, education, government, therapeutic, philanthropic or social rehabilitation programs, as well as at Native American pueblos and Arts & Crafts communities. The presentation will feature items from the author's own collection.

For the second seminar, Riley Humler, Rookwood pottery expert, Auctions at Rookwood, LLC auction manager, former gallery director at Cincinnati Art Galleries, and Antiques Roadshow appraiser, will discuss one of his favorite topics, Rookwood Pottery created during the 1920s. The seminar will include a discussion of glaze lines, artists and changing styles during that decade.

The convention will also include an afternoon tour on Thursday, April 28th to the Trenton City Museum, located in the magnificent 1848 Ellarslie Mansion. The private, guided tour will cover the museum's extensive collection of ceramic and porcelain wares, plus two special exhibits. Very affordable convention attendance packages and day rates are available. All events are open to the public.
